Contempt of Court Suggested.

In the matter of the guardianship of May Lown, Justice Cole, presiding in the Probate Court, has directed her former guardian, Wm. G. Lown, to show cause tomorrow why he should not be punished for contempt of court. Mr. Lown, it is alleged, has failed to obey an order requiring him to pay over to James'f. FRAMING TRIAL ISSUES SOOO CONTROL CONT

UTERMENLE ESTATE BEFORE THE COURT ON MOTION.

Hearing was had today before Justice Cole in the Probate Court upon the motion of Charles H. Utermehle for the framing of issues in the contest over the estate of George W. Utermehle and upon the petition of Leroy M. Taylor suggesting the death of Rose M. Taylor and asking that those interested in her estate be made paries. After argument by counsel the court determined upon and signed the following ssues for trial before a jury: "Was the said Charles H. Utermehle, in June, 1900, estopped against the said Rose M. Taylor and Mamie E. Norment from disputing the validity of said paper writing, dated the 7th day of December, 1887, as the last will and testament of said George W. Utermehle, as a will of personal prop-

"Was the said Charles H. Utermehle, in June, 1900, estopped as against said Rose M. Taylor and Mamie E. Norment from disputing the validity of said paper writing, dated the 7th day of December, 1887, as the last will and testament of said George W. Utermehle, as a will of real estate?

"At the time of the execution by said George W. Utermehle of said paper writing, dated December 7th, 1887, as his last will and testament, was the said George W. Utermehle of sound and disposing mind and capable of executing a valid deed or contract?

"Was the execution of said paper writing, dated December 7, 1887, by said George W. Utermehle as his last will and testament, procured by the undue influence of Rose M. Taylor and Leroy M. Taylor, senior, or either of them, or any other person or persons? "Was the execution of said paper writing, dated the 7th day of December, 1887, by George W. Utermehle, as his last will and testament, procured by the fraud of Rose M. Taylor and Leroy M. Taylor, senior, or either of them, or of any other person or either of them, or of any other person or persons?

"Was the execution of said paper writing, dated December 7, 1887, by said George W. Utermehle, as his last will and testament, procured by the duress of coercion of Rose M. Taylor and Leroy M. Taylor, senior, or either of them, or of any other person or persons?"

Questions of Law Reserved. The court further directed that all questions of law involved not heretofore determined be reserved for future consideration.

An order was also passed making Leroy M. Taylor, sr., Leroy M. Taylor, jr., and the latter's two children parties to the pro-Attorneys R. Ross Perry, Wilton J. Lambert and D. W. Baker represented Mr. Utermehle, and Attorneys A. S. Worthington and Thos. P. Woodward appeared for Hearing was begun today before Justice Bradley, in Equity Court No. 2, in connec-tion with the motion for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the real estate of which Mrs. Rose M. Taylor died possessed, pending the disposition of the Utermehle will case. The arguments will cherry blossoms. Mary Agnes Meyer also contributes an excellent composition to this This year for the first time there is no This year for the first time there is no black and white section to the exhibition, "The Coming of Night," a panel in burnt wood, by Mr. Wm. Fuller Curtis, being the only monotint shown. This, however, is a host in itself. In it five female figures typify the elements of evening. The first is calling the bats, the next holds a censer for odors, the third has in her hand a frog recalling the living voices, the fourth carries poppies and symbolizes sleep, and the last lifts up the exescent moon. It is a beautiful conception, executed with the greatest skill—artistic in every particular, and displaying exquisite drawing, as well and displaying exquisite drawing, as well as a keen sense of decorative effect.

Five remarkably fine miniatures by Laura C. Hills of Boston are shown, two by Miss Forster, three by Mrs. Decker and one by Miss B. E. Perri Sculpture Exhibit.

The exhibition of sculpture is exceedingly small. A head of Mr. Underwood, by Mr. Rudolph Evans, which is interestingly strong, though somewhat intense; a satyr's head, modeled with much freeness and vim, by Miss Edith Hope Ogden; a portrait bust, by Mr. Dunbar, and two exquisite little bronzes, by Solon Borglum, one of a lame horse and the other a man and pony in a blizzard.

Altogether, this constitutes a small but exceptionally well chosen collection, against which as an exhibition almost no complaint can be made, and it is earnestly hoped that it may receive from the picture-loving people of Washington the same enthusiastic interest and generous pa-tronage that they so lately accorded the exhibition of the work of the Japanese art students, held but a few days since in the

THE ARCHITECTURAL EXHIBITION. The exhibition of the Washington Architectural Club is in the atrium of the gallery proper, and for this reason has already been seen by a good many persons, though the opening reception is to be held tonight with that of the Society of Washington Artists. Some confusion has been caused in connection with this exhibition by the circuit drawing of the Architectural League of America having been placed on view in the atrium some two weeks ago. This, however, constituted merely a traveling exhibition, the most of which has now been removed and the new space refilled by the new collection. This consists of about 320 catalogued exhibits, embracing the work of members of the New York League, the T-Square Club of Philadelphia. Washington architects and students of the Corcoran Scientific School and the University of Pennsylvania. For several years these exhibitions have been held annually in the Octagon House, the headquarters of the Architect's Club and Institute, and have been somewhat technical in char-This exhibition has been arranged, acter. This exhibition has been arranged, however, so as to be equally comprehensible and interesting to the general public and to the professional fraternity. It is composed not only of drawings and photographs of some of the best examples of modern architecture, but also of picturesque paintings in both oil and water colors by well known artists and illustrators. As well as designs for mural decotrators, as well as designs for mural deco-rations, for stained glass windows, furni-

Among the purely architectural, the design for Mr. Carnegie's new residence in New York city will surely just now attract attention, though it should always do so from its architectural merit, aside from its philanthropic owner. It is by H. T. Hardenburgh, the architect of the Raleigh and Willard hotels.

The elaborate plans for the new build-ings and grounds at the United States Naval Academy in Amapolis by Ernest Flagg of New York are still on exhibition, but will be sent from here directly to the Pan-American exposition. These plans are already being carried out, as Congress during the last session appropriated $1,000,000 to ward their expense. To carry out the entire scheme will, it is estimated, cost no less than $20,000,000, to it.

The elaborate drawings for a ball room

The elaborate drawings for a ball room for "Mrs. M." of this city will doubtless set every one to guessing and create many pleasant fancles in the minds of next season's debutantes. Somewhat in a more serious vein is the colored drawing showing the front eleva-tion of the new manual training school, which is now in construction and will probably be ready for odcupancy by the beginning of the fall term. It is by Mr. W. B. Wood and is severely plain and exceeding ly substantial and appropriate.

Medal Winners.

The drawings which received the gold and silver medals at the exhibition lately held in New York by the Architects' League are shown. They are for a boat landing and the competition was only open to men under thirty years of age.

All Washingtonians will be interested in a little drawing intended to represent the permanent reviewing stand which the inaugural committee propose erecting with the surplus funds remaining in their hands as a memorial of President McKinley's secas a memorial of President McKiniey's sec-ond inauguration. It is somewhat Grecian in device, very simple and attractive, and the project will in all probability be car-ried into effect. Mr. Van Ingen, who, it will be remembered, did some of the decorative work in the Congressional Library, is represented by two large mural paintings. A large decorative panel, by Mr. A. R. Willett, is one of the most striking exhibits. A peacock is the principal element in its composition, which is simple and somewhat classic. It is specially notable for its charming color schem Interesting Water Colors. Most important among the paintings are the two large water colors by F.
